Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion are lay people who distribute Holy Communion during Mass. They are extraordinary because the ordinary minister of Holy Communion is a bishop, priest or deacon. We call them Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion rather than Extraordinary Ministers of the Eucharist because “of the Eucharist” would refer to ministering during the entire Mass as do bishops, priests and deacons. For brevity, Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion are often known simply as EMs.

An acolyte is also an Extraordinary Minister of Holy Communion. From 1972, being instituted as an acolyte has been a step for a seminarian on the road to priesthood. From 1983, the ministry of acolyte was broadened to men who were not seminarians, and in January this year Pope Francis broadened it to include women also. EMs are commissioned in their parish but acolytes are instituted by the bishop during Mass.
