Eucharistic Miracles

To help us believe, from time-to-time God has allowed visible miracles of the Eucharist to occur, Eucharistic Miracles as we call them. These are miracles that occurred during Mass when the bread changed into the appearance of flesh during the consecration and the wine changed into the appearance of blood during the consecration. Many such Eucharistic Miracles have occurred in various parts of the world throughout the two millennia of Christian history and have been authenticated by the Church.

One of the better-known ones, in Lanicano in Italy, is visited by Irish pilgrims on their visit to St. Padre Pio's shrine since both are on the east coast of Italy. Around the year 700, a monk who feared he was losing his vocation was celebrating Mass, and during the consecration the host turned into flesh and the wine turned into blood. Even though the miracle took place almost 1300 years ago, you may still see the flesh in a monstrance which is exposed every day and the blood in a glass chalice. The blood has congealed and is now in five clots in the glass chalice. In 1971 and 1981 a hospital laboratory tested the flesh and blood and discovered that the flesh is myocardium, which is heart muscular tissue, so we could say it is the heart of Jesus, the Sacred Heart, and the blood is of the blood group AB. In 1978 NASA scientists tested the blood on the Turin Shroud and interestingly also discovered that it is of the blood group AB. (The Sudarium, Face Cloth of Christ, in John 20:6 is also of the blood group AB.) Even though human flesh and blood should not have remained preserved for 1300 years the hospital lab tests found no trace of any preservatives.
